Off-Campus Resources

A Case Manager can help discuss, identify, and connect you with off-campus resources as appropriate depending upon your articulated needs. Please know that utilizing off-campus resources does not limit a student's ability to also use on-campus resources. It is important to know that there may be costs associated with the utilization of off-campus resources.

What if I do not want to use any resources on campus but still need support?

While UNC Charlotte has many great resources on campus to support its community members, we understand that some individuals may wish to receive support off-campus for any number of reasons. The Title IX Office can assist in connecting you to community resources, and some of these resources are also listed in the Interpersonal Violence Resource Guide (titleix.charlotte.edu/interpersonal-violence-resource-guide).

Why did I receive an outreach letter from the Title IX Office in my University email inbox?

As part of the University's commitment to supporting all community members and ensuring a fair and equitable process, upon notice of the formal grievance process being initiated the Title IX Office will reach out to you, the Respondent. The purpose of our outreach is to schedule a meeting to discuss the formal grievance process as well as provide resources and support. If you elect not to schedule a meeting with a Case Manager at the time of initial outreach, please know case management remains available to you throughout the formal grievance process and for the duration of your enrollment.

What should I do if I am named as a Respondent in a formal grievance process regarding an alleged incident of sexual harassment or interpersonal violence?

The Title IX Office is available to answer any questions you may have regarding grievance procedures, which may include a formal investigation and hearing, as well as discuss available supportive measures. You are encouraged to schedule a meeting with the Title IX Office during which a Case Manager will be able to discuss the grievance process in more detail and speak with you regarding any specific academic and personal concerns you may have. Please call the Title IX Office at (704) 687-6130 to schedule a meeting.

How long will the process take?

The University seeks to provide a fair and equitable process and to resolve formal complaints within sixty (60) days, excluding any appeals. The length of time for the formal grievance process may vary depending upon the unique circumstances of the case. In the University's experience, circumstances including, but not limited to, parallel criminal investigations, multiple witnesses, and difficulties with availability and scheduling of parties and witnesses often exist and impact the time frame to resolution. If the formal grievance process takes longer than one hundred twenty (120) days, the Title IX Office will provide a written explanation to all parties as to the reason(s) for the delay. In addition to providing these notices, the Title IX Office can answer questions you may have and case management remains available to you.

Is the information I share with the Title IX office confidential?

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, or FERPA, is a Federal law that protects the privacy of student educational records. While not strictly confidential, the Title IX Office is subject to FERPA and protects the privacy of your information when providing supportive measures. It is important to know that as part of an investigation, your testimony will be used in accordance with university policy. In certain circumstances, the university may be compelled to release specific information should a finding of responsibility be made by the Office of Student Conduct and Academic Integrity. Your Case Manager can help answer any questions you may have regarding confidentiality.

I am struggling academically and personally due to being named in a formal grievance process as a Respondent, what accommodations are available to me?

In the Title IX Office, we care about the safety, well-being, and success of all of our community members. We are committed to a fair and equitable process, and supportive measures are available to you to help mitigate any possible impacts a formal grievance process may have on your academic and personal welfare.

At your request, a faculty accommodation letter can be sent on your behalf to initiate pursuing academic accommodations. Such supportive measures may include extra time on assignments, excused absences, rescheduled exams, course withdrawals due to extenuating circumstances, or taking incompletes.

Counseling and Psychological Services, or CAPS, is available to provide therapeutic services to all enrolled students and can assist in referral to services off-campus if needed due to the specific needs identified in an initial appointment.

What can I do if others find out I have been named as a Respondent in a formal grievance process and start harassing me?

The University has strong policies against retaliation. If you fear you are being retaliated against for your involvement in an alleged incident of sexual harassment or interpersonal violence or participating in a formal grievance process, please promptly report this concern to the Title IX Coordinator by calling (704) 687-6130, emailing titleixcoordinator@unc.edu, or coming in person to the Title IX Office. Directions to our office can be found on our website at titleix.charlotte.edu.

I received a charge letter, does this mean I am responsible?

The letter you received, called a Notice of Investigation, serves to inform you of the initiation of a formal grievance process. Receipt of a Notice of Investigation does not mean that you are responsible for the charges identified in the letter. In fact, the letter includes a statement regarding the fact that you are presumed not responsible for the alleged conduct and that a determination on responsibility is not made until the conclusion of the grievance process. The letter additionally outlines your rights and directs you to important information regarding the associated policy(s) related to the allegations. You will additionally be provided with the Complainant's name, the alleged policy violation(s), the date of the alleged incident, and the location of the alleged incident if known so that you may sufficiently prepare a response before any initial interview.

Am I able to bring someone with me to any scheduled meetings?

During the formal grievance process, you may wish to have someone with you when you meet with your assigned Case Manager, the Investigator, or if you have a meeting with the Title IX Coordinator or Director of Student Accountability and Conflict Resolution. It is your right to have an advisor of your choice present with you during these meetings and any potential hearing as part of the formal grievance process. Your advisor of choice can, but does not have to be, an attorney.
